Welcome to the Presidio of San Francisco

The Presidio of San Francisco is a beautiful national treasure and one of the country's most distinguished parks.

Once the Army's premiere west coast installation, the Presidio is now a National Historic Landmark District and part of the Golden Gate National Recreation Area, the world's largest national park in an urban area.

Since the U.S. Army departed in 1994, the Presidio has undergone a transition from military post to public park. Its buildings, landscapes, and infrastructure — once critical to national defense — are gradually being revitalized for civilian use.

A new community is taking shape within the gates, with an estimated 2,400 residents and more than 200 organizations now located here. The park also welcomes visitors who come to enjoy its open space, recreational resources, and historic setting, and to participate in public programs.

The Presidio's interior lands are managed by the Presidio Trust, a federal agency charged with preserving the park's natural, cultural, scenic, and recreational resources, while achieving long-term financial self-sufficiency. The National Park Service manages the coastal areas. The Presidio also benefits from the support of the non-profit Golden Gate National Parks Conservancy.

Did you know?

- Formerly one of the oldest continuously operating military posts in the nation, the Presidio became part of the 75,500-acre Golden Gate National Recreation Area (GGNRA) when the U.S. Army departed in 1994.
- With 780 contributing features, the Presidio was declared a National Historic Landmark District in 1962.
- The Presidio is part of the United Nations International Network of Biosphere Reserves, a network of ecosystems recognized for biological diversity.
- The Presidio is a Center for Environmental Innovation, one of twenty sites recognized for the leadership role they play within the national park system.
- The Presidio comprises 1,491 acres, 991 of which are open space.
- The Presidio has 768 buildings, 469 of which are historic.
- Approximately 2,000 people work for a mix of about 200 non-profit, for-profit, and government organizations.
- Approximately 2,400 people live in the park; people who work in the park occupy about one-quarter of the housing.
- About 280 native plant species thrive here, 16 of which are rare or endangered, such as the Raven's manzanita.
- A 300-acre planted historic forest of Monterey cypress, Monterey pine, and blue gum eucalyptus graces the Presidio's gates and ridges.
- More than 200 species of birds, including California Quail, Great Horned Owls, and Snowy Egrets depend on the park. The Presidio is also home to mammals, reptiles, and aquatic species such as native gray fox, the alligator lizard, and the three-spined stickleback fish.
- The park showcases architectural styles from every major military construction period since 1848, including Italianate, Greek Revival, Mediterranean, and Mission Revival.
- Twenty-eight miles of hiking, biking, and multi-use trails traverse the Presidio, including the Juan Bautista de Anza National Historic Trail, the Bay Area Ridge Trail, and historic Lovers' Lane.
