LODGE AT THE PRESIDIO

Opened on June 28, 2018, the Lodge at the Presidio is San Francisco's closest lodging to the Golden Gate Bridge. The 42-room, three-story hotel is housed in former US Army barracks, built between 1895-97 and exemplifies the highest standards of sustainability. The majority of the guestrooms feature stunning views of the San Francisco Bay, the city skyline, the Golden Gate Bridge, or a combination thereof. The lodge is the sister property to the Inn at the Presidio, which opened in 2012.

Location

Centrally located in the heart of the Presidio, the Lodge is just steps away from the seven-acre Main Post public greens and the Presidio Visitor Center that opened in February 2017. The free PresidiGo Shuttle provides easy access to the amenities of downtown San Francisco, making the lodge a home base both for natural and urban adventures.

The Presidio features 24 miles of hiking trails, 25 miles of biking trails, the 18-hole Presidio Golf Course, cultural and recreation tenants such as the Walt Disney Family Museum and a trampoline park, restaurants, venues for hosting celebrations and meetings, and free public events. The park is home to the Presidio Officers' Club, an award-winning museum and cultural center. Across from the lodge, a new 14-acre landscape designed by the creators of New York's High Line – Presidio Tunnel Tops – is anticipated to open in 2021.

History

The Lodge at the Presidio is housed in one of the iconic Montgomery Street Barracks built between 1895-1897 by the US Army to house six artillery companies, a cavalry troop, and two infantry companies. The historic streetscape was later dubbed "Infantry Row." This construction was part of a wave of improvements and changes made across the Presidio in the 1890s, corresponding with its rise in importance as a military post. By the end of 1897, the Presidio was one of the five largest Army posts in the country with over 900 men and officers living there, almost twice the size of the garrison a decade earlier.

During the Spanish-American War in 1898 and the Philippine-American War in 1899, the building was used for hospital wards. During World War I, it operated as housing for students in the Reserve Officers Training Camps held at the Presidio to prepare new junior officers for the rapidly expanding Army. For most of the period between World War I and World War II, it was the home to companies of the 30th Infantry Regiment, "San Francisco's Own." In 1980, enlisted personnel ceased using the building as barracks. During the 1980s, the building was renovated for FEMA occupancy until 2000.

Design

Builder - Plant Construction

Architect - Architectural Resources Group

Interior Design - LC Interiors

Art Program - Julie Coyle Art Associates

The design of the Lodge is "Transitional," featuring a classic and timeless aesthetic by blending traditional and modern styles. The Presidio's rich history is showcased throughout the property with artisan details and memorabilia, complemented by contemporary finishes and furnishings. Art and design elements "bring the outdoors in" by reflecting the beauty of the Presidio's national park setting, including its forest and bay views. Social areas include a courtyard garden with fire pit, a front porch with rocking chairs, lobby reception, and a large dining room lounge with a fireplace.
